

TEACHER'S GUIDE

Primary Source Document Collection

MISSION 4: "City of Immigrants"

Interior of a garment factory, photo

During the first years of the twentieth century, garment manufacturing began to shift from the tenements of the Lower East Side to factories located in other parts of lower Manhattan. This photograph shows one such factory, which could accommodate a far greater number of workers than the average home-based sweatshop.

Source: Unknown.